

QUIET SERVICE IS THEIR WISH

Sister Of Mrs. McKinley Asks That They Be Simple---Many Notables To Come.

DETAILS ARE NOT ALL COMPLETED

Roosevelt And Party Will Reach Canton On Wednesday
Next--All Canton/Will Pay Tribute By Closing All Stores.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Canton, Ohio, May 27.—It was given out at the McKinley home today that the details of the funeral of Mrs. McKinley were not ready to be announced. It is a strong desire of Mrs. Barber, a sister of the deceased, to have the services as simple as possible.

The Canton Business Men's association this forenoon decided to suspend all business as far as practicable from 2 to 4 Wednesday, during the hours of the funeral services. It is expected President Roosevelt and party and Vice President and Mrs. Fairbanks will arrive at Canton, a short time before the hour set for the funeral and will leave Canton immediately after the ceremony.

Messages have been received from numerous statesmen and friends of the late President McKinley that they are arranging to come to the funeral. The funeral arrangements so far as made are that Dr. Buxton will have charge of the services, which are to be simple. They will be held at the McKinley home at two o'clock Wednesday afternoon.

Secretary Cortelyou is directing the arrangements and will remain here until after the funeral. Dr. Rixey left here at 5:33 Sunday evening for Washington. He will join President Roosevelt and go with him on his trip to Indianapolis and Lansing this week. It was announced that President Roosevelt and Secretary Loeb will arrive in Canton Wednesday morning to attend the funeral services. Vice President Fairbanks, who had often been a house guest of the McKinnleys, is expected to reach here in time to attend the funeral service.

The body of Mrs. McKinley will be placed in the vault in West Lawn cemetery which holds the remains of her husband, until the completion of the national mausoleum on Monument hill.

when both cañefs will be transferred to receptacles in that tomb.

From numerous friends of deceased Mrs. Barber received telegrams of condolence on the death of her sister. Among them were telegrams from President Roosevelt and Vice President Fairbanks.

Mrs. McKinley's life of almost 60 years had been made familiar to the nation by the fact that more than half of it was a period of invalidism. Through all this, however, she showed a firm and unwavering belief in the career of her husband and by her cheering words, in spite of personal afflictions, encouraged him when there was darkness at hand.

She believed that his star of destiny would never set until he had become president of this land, and for more than a quarter of a century cherished that belief until her hopes were realized.

After President McKinley's death, she expressed a desire to join him and prayed day by day that she might die. Later, however, she frequently told friends she desired to live until the completion of the McKinley mausoleum, which is the gift of the nation, and which is to be dedicated on Monument hill September 30 next.

The McKinley estate which was left by the president was appraised at $215,000 when the inventory was made. It has increased in value since that time. By the terms of the will of Mr. McKinley, the estate, at the death of Mrs. McKinley, was to be divided equally among his brother, Abner McKinley, now deceased, and sisters, Mrs. Duncan and Miss Helen McKinley, of Cleveland.

Mrs. Harmanus Baer (Mabel McKinley) is the daughter and heir of Abner McKinley.

FLORENCE DUGAN IN COURT THIS MORNING

Case Against Woman Who Shot Geo. Schumaker Continued Again—May Move Schumaker.

Florence Dugan was brought into court again this morning and her case continued until June 4th and she was taken back to the county jail. Her confinement appears to be telling on her and she does not look as strong as she did when first arrested for shooting George Schumaker. Schumaker is still at the Mercy Hospital, although it has been suggested that he be moved to the county hospital or even the contagious hospital with a special attendant. To both of these plans District Attorney Fisher has refused to give his consent and the matter was laid before the county board this afternoon and it is possible something definite will be done. Schumaker continues to remain about the same and shows wonderful vitality. He eats solid food but the presence of gangrene precludes any possibility of his ultimate recovery. He has a special nurse at the hospital and a private room, which in the crowded condition of the building may make it advisable to have him removed.

UNWRITTEN LAW DEFENSE OF EX-JUDGE IN VIRGINIA

Former Jurist Charged With Murder Pleads That Deed Was To Avenge Betrayal Of His Daughter.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Richmond, Va., May 27.—The case of ex-Judge William G. Loving, charged with the murder of Theodore Estes, whom Judge Loving accused of having drugged and wronged his young daughter, Elizabeth, while out driving, will be called before the term of the circuit court to convene in Nelson county today. Owing to the fact that the entire county has been deeply stirred by the sensational case it is likely that a change of venue will be asked for, and if granted the trial will probably be transferred to Petersburg or to this city. If current stories amount to anything the trial will prove one of the biggest sensations ever recorded in the judicial annals of Virginia.

All of Nelson county appears to have arrayed itself on the one side or the other of the famous case. Many openly uphold Judge Loving in carrying out the unwritten law, while others are inclined to think he acted too hastily and blame him for not giving his victim a chance to explain, if any explanation were possible.

It is reported that the trial will bring to light many startling things heretofore unknown and bearing directly upon the tragedy, among others that it will be shown that Estes, on at least two previous occasions, had made similar attempts to drug girls with liquor. On one of these occasions, it is said, the intended victim threatened to inform her father if Estes did not desist in his persecution, which threat had the desired effect. This young lady, it is stated, will be placed on the witness stand by the defense. It is held that the production of evidence that Estes had on previous occasions offered girls liquor, coupled with the fact that Judge Loving waited until the day after the alleged occurrence and after both he and his wife had talked with their daughter before hunting for and killing Estes, will have weight in favor of the former jurist.

The Estes family, on the other hand, are firm in their belief in the innocence of young Estes of the alleged wrongdoing and are preparing to make a vigorous effort to convict Judge Loving of the murder. The family has engaged Daniel Harmon of Charlottesville, one of the ablest lawyers of the state, to assist in the prosecution. Judge Loving likewise has engaged eminent counsel in the persons of John L. Lee of Lynchburg and R. Walton Moore of Fairfax, who will assist Aubrey E. Strode, the personal counsel of Judge Loving.

AGASSIZ CENTENAL TO BE CELEBRATED THIS WEEK

Educators And Scientists Join In Memorial Exercises--Great Professor Discovers Michigan Copper.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Boston, Mass., May 27.—The centennial celebration in honor of the memory of Louis Agassiz, which will occupy the attention of educators and scientists of this country as well during the greater part of this week, promises to be an unusual demonstration.

Cambridge, the adopted home of the illustrious scientist and the scene of his labors for many years, will be the seat of the principal celebration. A principal event of the celebration will be a public reunion of the surviving pupils of Agassiz to be held this evening in Sanders theatre. At this meeting, Colonel Thomas Wentworth Higginson will preside and brief addresses will be made by President Charles W. Eliot of Harvard university, Professor A. Lawrence Lowell of the Scientific school and Professor William H. Niles of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Professor Agassiz, whose influence on scientific investigation in America was probably greater and more lasting than that of any one else, was of French Huguenot ancestry, and a native of Switzerland, in which country he was born May 28, 1807. He studied botany in his youth at Moirans and Orbe, and medicine, physiology, anatomy and zoology at Zurich and Heidelberg. He came to America in 1846 on a scientific mission for the King of Prussia, and to deliver a course of lectures in Boston. He accepted a professorship in the newly-founded scientific school in Cambridge, and entered upon his duties there in 1848, having secured an honorable discharge from the Prussian government.

Agassiz never returned to Prussia. He married a Cambridge woman and settled in that city, afterward becoming one of the faculty of Harvard university, but before this came about he had established several stations along the coast line as far south as Charleston, where he and pupils who followed him made local investigations of geological study.

Professor Agassiz made the discovery of copper ore in the upper peninsula of Michigan that led to the founding of the great Calumet & Hecla Mining company, which has since poured millions of dollars into the coffers of leading families of Boston. While traveling through the west on a lecture tour in the '60s, Professor Agassiz heard of a great outcropping of copper ore on the shores of Lake Michigan. He plunged into the wilds and made his way alone to the locality and found the wonderful outcropping point of copper. Returning to Boston he sent out his son to make further investigations, the result of which was the formation of the Calumet & Hecla company, of which the son, Professor Agassiz, is still the president.

LEGISLATURE WOULD SAVE STUDENTS ANY ANNOYANCE

Pass Measures This Morning That Will End Their Voting And Prohibit Saloons On State Street.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., May 27.—The legislature is displaying great solicitude for the university students. The assembly this morning advanced the bill to keep the saloon three-quarters of a mile from the university and prohibiting them on State street between the university and the capitol building. It also passed the Bancroft bill to forbid the voting of students whose residence at Madison is but temporary, for educational purposes only.

The advocates of the bills argued that the saloons organized the student vote with an unwholesome effect on the students and the Madison government.

A bill to prohibit tobacco smoking by all persons under 16 years was passed.

THOMAS MORGAN'S VENETIAN
SOLD TO MRS. A. P. LOVEJOY

One of the valuable and much admired paintings of Thurbur Collection to remain in City.
"The Grand Canal of Venice," one of the oil paintings which was much admired by those who visited the exhibit from the Thurbur galleries at Library hall last week, has been purchased by Mrs. A. P. Lovejoy. It is a sane and temperate color treatment of the vision unfolded to the eye on a sultry afternoon from a point near where the main "highway" of the city opens onto the large lagoon. St. Mark's and the Campanile are visible on the hazy middle distance and the gleams of colored sails reflected in the blue waters are aspects of the contemplative foreground. The picture is by Thomas Moran, an American artist of note, and was listed at $550. A number of water colors and etchings from this collection are also destined to find their way into Janesville homes.

Vulgarized Fashions.

GOOD OF ALL IS FUTURE'S IDEAL

REV. R. C. DENISON POINTS THE WAY TO NEW ERA.

MEMORIAL SUNDAY SERMON

Dealt With Certain Phases of the Contemporary Life of the Nation.

In obedience to the order issued by Commander J. F. Carle and Adjutant E. O. Kimbrey, W. H. Sargent Post No. 26, G. A. R., and escort of the local Camp of Spanish American War Veterans, and members of W. H. Sargent Corps No. 21, W. R. C., marched yesterday morning to the Congregational church where the annual Memorial Day Sunday service was held. The entry of the veteran warriors in uniform with their flags and banners and the doffing of the hats and seating at the order of the commander was impressive and inspiring to a high degree.

After the organ prelude, the prayers and scriptural readings and the offering "To Thee, O Country," Rev. Robert C. Denison delivered a sermon on "The Kingdom of God in America," taking his text from Matthew—VII:10. There came a time when God said "I am tired of kings and will reveal a new land in the mists of the west." The speaker dwelt at some length on the conditions under which the great blessing of civil liberty was worked out in loneliness and exile by the first settlers and the heroic sacrifice of the 60's which was to determine that what they had wrought out should not perish from the earth. Something must come to pass in American life which has been justified the great price that has been paid and the speaker found that this something must be a united effort to attain the highest good of all the people. America exists for no class and no oligarchy. The attainment of the highest good is no fantastic dream of the theorist. It was the vision of Lincoln and it gleamed forth in the ideals of those who wrote the Declaration. The Kingdom of God is not a city which you and I are to enter after we are dead. It is the realization of the highest welfare of all here on earth. We hear much of the rights of men as opposed to tyranny but we are coming to a different conception: the rights of the man are never so great as the rights of men. Take the saloon or child labor problems. The last stand of those who defend transgression of the law by these institutions is a mistaken idea of individual liberty. Society says to them: "You have no rights which transcend the rights of the nation. The power more than any individual privilege." The same principle applies to the great railroad managements and mismanagements, the operations of Wall street finance, the question of the wealthy employers of labor whose employees are under paid and underfed.

America has been doing things in the past. The world has never seen so many great material triumphs revealed under the auspices of one nation. We have accomplished great engineering feats; we have built within our own borders half of the world's railroads; we raise much of its wheat and most of its corn; we have reared the greatest educational structure it has ever seen. This was a necessary and significant part of our life, but we are now passing beyond that era and national life must turn to other tasks. The man of the future is not to be the promoter who can make his way to success and glory in finance but the man who can go back into the depths and ask: "What is the great purpose and destiny of our being?" And the men today who command the highest confidence of the people are those who like our President represent the best thought of the time—the concept that this nation exists for the good of all.

If this is our national destiny, what are we, as individuals, to do? In the first place we can enlarge our ideas of right. Almost every man prides himself that way back in the center of his consciousness he tries to do right. Far back of that, however, lies the question: "What is your idea of right?" Jesus said: "Unless you have a larger idea of right than the Scribes and Pharisees you shall not enter the Kingdom of Heaven. One man's idea of doing right may be merely to refrain from getting drunk, and that is an insignificant conception. It is John D. Rockefeller's idea that right consists in never wasting money, making it earn good dividends, and being energetic, economical, and tireless in business. Such a conception can play but little part if we are to realize the national conscience. Right to Jesus was to be just to other men.

EVANSVILLE VICTOR IN FORENSIC TILT

Debated with Monroe High School on Ship Subsidy Question—Other Cut-Off City News.

Evansville, May 25.—The high school joint debate, Monroe vs. Evansville, which occurred here at the high school building last evening, was well attended and proved very interesting. The judges were Prof. Mack, Prof. Dickinson and Prof. Shepard of the University of Wisconsin and their decision was two to one in favor of Evansville. Both sides were well prepared and showed thorough knowledge of the knotty question. "Resolved, That the United States should establish and maintain a system of bounties and subsidies to encourage and protect the American marine." The affirmative was handled by Erwin Winter, Lester Bullard and Spencer Pullen of Evansville, and the negative by Manual Elmer, Frank Gopin and Clark Roub of Monroe.

The funeral of Henry H. Ellis occurred Friday afternoon, May 25, at 2:30 o'clock from the Monic Temple and was attended by the Masons, Knights of Pythias and a large number of sympathizing friends of the family. The services were conducted by Cheyenne Lodge No. 1, A. F. & A. M., with Worshipful Master T. B. Kennedy officiating, assisted by Dr. G. C. Rafter, and were very impressive. The floral offerings were numerous and beautiful tribute of the love and esteem in which the deceased was held by his fellow townsmen. Judge J. A. Riner paid a fitting tribute to the many noble qualities of the deceased in a short but very impressive address. The remains were interred in Lakewood cemetery. The above appeared in the Cheyenne Recorder and will interest many oldtime friends.

Mrs. T. W. North will go to Stoughton today, where she will deliver an address at the annual thank offering meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary society. In the Methodist church Sunday evening school friends of Miss Wm. Hubbard gave her a pleasant surprise at her home last evening.

EXTRA STORIES OF BLACK HAWK'S WARS

Charles Holt, Former Owner of the Gazette, Writes from Kankakee on Subject.

On Monday last the Gazette published a story illustrated with cuts, of the scenes incident to the closing days of the famous Black Hawk War. The article was one of two; the other will appear at a later date. Evidently the subject has awakened memories in the minds of several of the oldtime citizens, among them Charles Holt. Mr. Holt was for many years editor and owner of the Gazette, and is now located in Kankakee, Illinois. He is ninety years of age and his remarkable memory has led him to write the following article for the Gazette, which is published below:

Kankakee, May 23, '07.

You "stirred" lead, and a big one which you started a "Forty Years Ago" department in your paper. The simple printing of names which are now more frequently seen in the mounds of a cemetery than in the places where they were formerly displayed, would compensate the room devoted to that department outside of the recollections inspired of oldtime associations and departed friends. I never miss looking for that department with its well-filled columns and familiar print. I have been especially interested in your review of the closing history of the Blackhawk war, and perhaps a supplemental incident may find a place in your paper. I was, during the war, a boy in a Little Falls (N. Y.) newspaper printing office, and "caught on" some of the actors and events of that war incidentally to my employment.

One day my attention was attracted to the passing of two "extra" stage coaches and a crowd of men and boys following them. I followed to the stage office, where teams were changed, and learned that the occupants of the extras were Blackhawk, Illinois, "nobles," and a body of his chiefs who were on a return from Washington after the concluding fight of the war. A rumor subsequently prevailed that the coaches had been attacked at Rochester and the party killed. Another report was that the party had reached Buffalo on their return trip. I instituted an inquiry to determine whether Buffalo was a more western point than Rochester, and if it were, the rumor of the killing was, of course, unfounded. I suppose I was at that time as well informed on public matters as other boys of my age and requirements, and the ignorance of the geography of such prominent localities would be naturally accounted for, and will suggest a comparison of a not far distant time with the present diffusion of geographical knowledge. Of course, no thought entered my head, or the head of any other of that Little Falls gathering, that he or I would ever see that faraway land of Indian warfare and associate action in it, or who had some personal as well as historic knowledge of it. I have walked in one of the trails described in your map, and to that extent may be called a veteran explorer even if I failed to be a participant in a barbarous war.

May good luck stay with the Gazette, as it always attended it. Perhaps some survivor of the early days of the paper may bestow a good wish on one of its former publishers.

MYERS TOOK FIRST AND TWO SECONDS

Janesville Boy Star of Wisconsin Team in Dual Meet with Chicago.

In the dual track meet with Chicago in the Windy City Saturday afternoon Harold Myers of this city proved the star of the Wisconsin varsity competitors. The half-mile run, which he captured in 2:03 time, was the speediest of the afternoon of the midway school sprang into the lead and was closely followed by his running mate, Stuart. Myers followed the pair closely until the last turn on the second lap when he shot into first position and crossed the tape two yards ahead of Barker. Myers also took seconds in the 100-yard dash and the 200-yard dash, both events being won by Quigley, a Chicago dark horse. The Bower City boys' eleven points was only outdone by the thirteen credited to Merriam of Chicago.

PLAN BIG DITCH TO DRAIN THE MARSHES

A. S. Pomeroy of Edgerton Seeks Advice Relative to Similar Undertakings.

Plans are under way for the draining of the Albion marsh in Dane county. The drainage of this important strip of lowland will be an impetus to similar undertakings in Rock county, particularly in the Evansville marsh district. A. S. Pomeroy of Edgerton recently wrote the Gazette for information regarding similar undertakings in Rock county. The Evansville marsh proposition has lagged for the past year owing to the lack of interest of those interested, but it is possible it may be revived when the success of the Avon and Albion marsh projects are seen.

"THE TENDERFOOT" A DISAPPOINTMENT

Players of Mediocre Talent Were Handicapped by Illness and Other Untoward Circumstances.

To those who had witnessed the splendid production of Richard Carle and his company (Oct. 20, 1903) the imitation which was presented here Saturday afternoon and evening was a distinct disappointment. There were some extenuating circumstances. Miss Ruth White had been taken ill on the stage at Pond du Lac on Wednesday and an understudy (and quite a capable one, he it said) had her role of "Marion Worthington." Miss Grace Sloan sprained an ankle so badly while executing a dance at the afternoon performance as to require the services of Mrs. Charles Sutherland and James Gibson, and one of the show girls had to take her part of "Patsy," the wail, in the evening. Harry B. Williams was injured in some manner in Beloit and was unable to do any of the acrobatics expected of "Hop Lee," the servant. However, even though handicapped, the last-named was one of the best in the cast and in pathos his work approached that of William Rock, the original. Oscar L. Pieman did fairly well as the guileless "Zachary Pettibone." Some additional stunts with the jester and the mystic symbol "22" on "Ranger," the donkey were his sole original contributions to the delineation, and this undue emphasis on the farcical detracted from rather than added to the effectiveness and integrity of the play and its humorous situations. Lawrence Coover was possessed of a voice of wonderful range and tone, but as the dashing cavalier, "Col. Paul Winthrop," he was an awkward and stupid failure. Nor was Fred Bailey an adequate successor of Charles Wayne as "Sergeant Barker." While the original brought some redeeming qualities to his portrayal of the "military-masher," Bailey succeeded only in making his jumping-jack and monkey-cage antics wearisome. Recalling the artistic work four years ago of Ethel Johnson as "Patsy," the wail, Henry Norman, as "Honest John," Grace Cameron, as "Marion Worthington," Edmund Pieman, as "Col. Winthrop," the wonderful singing chorus of comely, young women and stalwart men; it is not strange that a large portion of the audience refused to grow enthusiastic over the efforts of this numerically smaller and immeasurably less gifted aggregation. The costumes were good and the singing ensembles acceptable. The depletion in the ranks of the already slender chorus made the Italian war dance of a meager four "braves" ridiculous. Large audiences witnessed both performances. The company opened at the Alhambra, Milwaukee, yesterday afternoon, and the veracious critics of the morning papers announce that Pignani in his "splendid characterization" has "handed" Richard Carle the original, a very large lemon.

..Forty Years Ago..

Janesville Daily Gazette, Monday, May 27, 1867.—Fatal Railroad Accident.—The down train on the E. & N.W. Railway ran over and killed a man named Henry Bingham, near Koshkonong station on Friday afternoon last. He lived in that vicinity and was conversing with the running of trains, but the one which ran over him had obtained the right of way—the southern train being late—and he was therefore not looking for this one. No blame is attached to those in charge of the train.

The organ grinding nuisance with monkey attachment, under our window today, evidently mistook this office for that of the Advance. Both being in the business of running an organ, it is natural that they should herd together.

By the remarks no reflection is intended to be cast upon the monkey that accompanies the traveling institution, which seems to be a well disposed little fellow and does not meddle with other people's business.

A Shooting Affair—A party of young bloods got on a bonder late on Saturday night or early Sunday morning and as they were passing along West Milwaukee street one of them managed to fall into the show window of Mr. Frank Wolman, smashing out a light of glass. As he slept in the store he was awakened by the crash, and supposing someone was endeavoring to break into the store he took his revolver and fired in the direction of the door. The young rowdies thought it about time to be leaving upon this hint, and started on but after they had gone a little ways some one fired on them with a shotgun loaded with small shot. Two or three of the party received some of the shot in various portions of the body, but no one was seriously hurt.

DESTRUCTION

May 27, 1896—Eleven years ago today a cyclone destroyed a large part of St. Louis. Find a victim.

Although two spit ball pitchers helped him to win the American league pennant and one of the two was responsible for the Chicago Americans winning the world's championship last fall, Manager Fielder Jones of the champions is in favor of doing away with the spit ball. Said he the other day:

"I warned President Comiskey against the evils of the spit ball two years ago. He laughed at me and said baseball was more prosperous than ever. That may be all true, but I would be willing to wager that the crowds would be even larger if it were not for the spit ball. Comiskey was on the rules committee when I begged him to have a rule inserted prohibiting a pitcher from moistening the ball, but he thought that my fears were groundless."

"In my opinion, the spit ball is doing a great injury to the game. In the first place, it is not natural. In the second place, it is not cleanly. Lots of people do not like to go out to the park and watch a pitcher slobbering all over a ball. Thirdly, the use of the spit ball lengthens the games, as pitchers who depend upon the spit ball consume so much time applying the moisture."

Jake Beckley comes pretty close to being the "grand old man of baseball." Like many another so called old timer,

While Napoleon Lajoie of Cleveland is the best all around second baseman and shortstop in this country, and that means the world, there is one man that so far as fielding is concerned, equals

him. He is Hobe Ferris of the Boston Americans. Hobe cannot bat as well as Lajoie, but he gathers in pretty much everything that falls into his territory and possibly a little bit more. As for getting high drives over the pitcher's head, Hobe is a second baseman par excellence. He has not his Larry Lajoie's height, but he makes up this lack by superior jumping ability.

TWENTY-EIGHT MORE INDICTMENTS FOUND

SAN FRANCISCO GRAND JURY ENDS ITS LABORS.

HELD IN HEAVY BONDS

Before Adjournment Until June 10 the Investigating Body Brings Many Men of Wealth Into Net.

San Francisco, May 27.—Six more millionaires and multimillionaires, some of them well known throughout the country, fell under the accusation of the Oliver grand jury Saturday, when that body, just before an adjournment till June 10, returned 14 indictments, jointly against G. H. Umbsen, J. E. Green and W. I. Brobeck, charging them with attempted bribery of public officials, and 14 indictments jointly against Frank G. Drum, Eugene de Sabia and John Martin, charging them with bribery of public officials. With the former group Abraham Ruef, the fallen political boss of San Francisco, was jointly indicted; with the latter group Ruef and Mayor Schmitz.

In all 28 indictments were found Saturday containing 126 counts and calling for bail bonds in the total sum of $1,250,000.

Umbsen, Green, Brobeck and Ruef are accused by the grand jury of offering a bribe of $1,000 each to Supervisors Boxton, Coffey, Coleman, Davis, Duffey, Furey, Gallagher, Harrigan, Kelly, Longergan, Mamlock, McGushin, Phillips, and Walsh on November 10, 1906, to award to the Parkside Transit company a street-railway franchise. This franchise was voted December 31, 1906, but the Spreckels, Heneys-Burns graft-bribery investigation getting under way at about that time the deal was abandoned and no money was passed, say the prosecutors.

The indictments against Drum, De Sabia, Martin, Ruef, and Schmitz charge them with giving a bribe of $750 each to supervisors in consideration of their vote, cast March 12, 1906, by which the legal gas rate for 1906, 1907 was fixed at 85 instead of 75 cents. Frank G. Drum is manager of the Tevis estate, one of the largest properties in the west. He is a member of the executive committee of the board of directors of the San Francisco Gas & Electric company, and of the Bay Cities Water company, and occupied an identical office in the Parkside Transit company. Eugene De Sabia is a director in and was formerly president of the Gas & Electric company.

Glass has furnished bonds of $20,000 and Calhoun, Mullally, Ford and Abbott furnished bonds totalling $500,000. A New York surety company standing security for 56 bonds in the sum of $10,000 each.

Later Mayor Schmitz appeared and gave bail in the sum of $160,000, divided into 16 bonds of $10,000 each.

Soldiers in Memorial Service.

New York, May 27.—Beneath leaden skies from which fell a misty rain, 15,000 armed men knelt in the sodden grass of the parade ground at the Brooklyn navy yard Sunday, participating in the fifth military field mass in memory of the sailors and soldiers who lost their lives during the war with Spain. In the center of the parade an altar had been erected and at this the priests, robed in white and gold, celebrated solemn high mass in memory of the dead.

Hobe Ferris.

Lajoie as regards the covering of the middle sack. He is Hobe Ferris of the Boston Americans. Hobe cannot bat as well as Lajoie, but he gathers in pretty much everything that falls into his territory and possibly a little bit more. As for getting high drives over the pitcher's head, Hobe is a second baseman par excellence. He has not his Larry Lajoie's height, but he makes up this lack by superior jumping ability.

Although two spit ball pitchers helped him to win the American league pennant and one of the two was responsible for the Chicago Americans winning the world's championship last fall, Manager Fielder Jones of the champions is in favor of doing away with the spit ball. Said he the other day:

"I warned President Comiskey against the evils of the spit ball two years ago. He laughed at me and said baseball was more prosperous than ever. That may be all true, but I would be willing to wager that the crowds would be even larger if it were not for the spit ball. Comiskey was on the rules committee when I begged him to have a rule inserted prohibiting a pitcher from moistening the ball, but he thought that my fears were groundless."

"In my opinion, the spit ball is doing a great injury to the game. In the first place, it is not natural. In the second place, it is not cleanly. Lots of people do not like to go out to the park and watch a pitcher slobbering all over a ball. Thirdly, the use of the spit ball lengthens the games, as pitchers who depend upon the spit ball consume so much time applying the moisture."

Jake Beckley comes pretty close to being the "grand old man of baseball." Like many another so called old timer,

While Napoleon Lajoie of Cleveland is the best all around second baseman and shortstop in this country, and that means the world, there is one man that so far as fielding is concerned, equals

him. He is Hobe Ferris of the Boston Americans. Hobe cannot bat as well as Lajoie, but he gathers in pretty much everything that falls into his territory and possibly a little bit more. As for getting high drives over the pitcher's head, Hobe is a second baseman par excellence. He has not his Larry Lajoie's height, but he makes up this lack by superior jumping ability.

Jake Beckley.

Jake still has the steely springs of his youth untried and well polished.

Beckley is now playing first base in splendid style for the St. Louis Nationals. Rumors were circulated to the effect that he was to be released and that Cincinnati would sign him, but the Cardinals held on to him. "Pop Up" John Gunzel got the Cincinnati berth, and report has it that he "is covering the bag in grand style and hitting the ball too." Sounds pretty good for John, doesn't it?

"A FACT"

You can sit down in the dental chair of Dr. Richards without feeling like going into spasms because of fear of pain.

He makes it his business to avoid hurting you.

It's a common thing to hear a patient say upon getting out of his chair, "Doctor, I won't be so much afraid next time."

"You didn't hurt me a bit."

Another common occurrence in his office is to hear people come in and say:

"Dr. Richards, your work for me has proven so satisfactory that I have recommended so and so to come to you for their work."

If you have Dr. Richards do your dental work you will be sure of at least two things:

It will be good work.
His prices will be most reasonable.

CAPTAIN CURTIS OF UNIVERSITY IS DEAD

Regular Army Officer Well Known in Janesville Dies in Madison Sunday.

Many Janesville persons will read with regret of the death of Captain Charles A. Curtis, U. S. A., commandant of the University battalion at Madison. Janesville students of late years all knew Captain Curtis personally and his many visits to Janesville have given him a wide acquaintance. Since 1893 he had been commandant of the university regiment.

Capt. Curtis is the author of the well known war story, "Captured by the Navajoes." He has also written a great number of short stories for magazines, dealing with military life. He was a cousin of Mrs. Charles Carpenter of 19 Milton avenue.

HEROES FOREVER YOUNG

COPYRIGHT 1907 BY ROBERTUS LOVE.

NOW Youth and Beauty—not the snows Of Age—enwreath the immortal To deck the sacred shrines of those Who in their youth and beauty fell.

FOR Time forever young hath kept The figures of our fallen ones, The boys in blue who bravely swept Against the maelstrom of the guns.

CUT down in manhood's waxing morn By War's red blade, the dragon tooth Of Age could leave them not forlorn. Since Death immortalized their youth!

ROBERTUS LOVE.

Soldiers Who Were Afraid.

By WALTER JAMES JAMES.

[Copyright, 1907, by C. N. Lurie.]

ABOUT ten years ago a veteran of the civil war visited the battlefield of Wilson creek in Missouri, where one of the earliest important battles of the war was fought. He was observed to be intently inspecting the stony ground on Bloody Hill, where, General Nathaniel Lyon, the Union commander, was killed in the fight of Aug. 10, 1861.

"What on earth are you looking for?" inquired a farmer who lived near by.

"Me?" replied the searcher. "Oh, I'm just a lookin' for my false teeth."

"Where did you drop 'em?" asked the farmer, supposing that the visitor had just lost his teeth.

"Well, it wuz right long here some-where," said the veteran. "I wuz so bad scared when I fust went into action here in '61, that my upper plate shook clean out of my head, an' I been a needin' 'em ever since."

The late Stephen Crane in the story which made his reputation as a writer, "The Red Badge of Courage," drew a picture of the impressions of a youth in his first battle which many veterans have declared is a faithful portrayal of their own feelings in a similar experience. This young man went into the fight determined not to show the white feather, but as the battle waxed warm he was seized in the grip of a terrible fear and suddenly took to his heels and made for the rear.

It is quite probable that if you will corner any old soldier and pin him down to absolute candor he will tell you that he was "scared to death," or words to that effect, when first he heard the hostile bullets whiz and knew that he must go forward into the conflict.

General Grant candidly confessed to a highly uncomfortable feeling upon two occasions of imminent battle, one being his first experience in the Mexican war, and the other, his initiation in the civil war after fifteen years of peace. He recorded these sensations in his personal memoirs. As to his experience in Mexico, he wrote:

"As we lay in our tents upon the Rio Grande, the artillery at the fort on the other side could be distinctly heard. The war had begun. There was no possible means of obtaining news from the garrison, and information from outside could not be otherwise than unfavorable. What General Taylor's feelings were during this suspense I do not know, but for myself, a young second lieutenant who had never heard a hostile gun before, I felt sorry that I had enlisted. A great many men, when they small battle after off, chafe to get into the fray. When they say so themselves they generally fall to convince their hearers that they are as anxious as they would like to make believe, and as they approach danger they become more subdued. This rule is not universal, for I have known a few men who were always aching for a fight when there was no enemy near who were as good as dead when the battle did come, but the number of such men is small.

After several years' retirement from the army Grant entered the great conflict of the sixties, his first command being the Twenty-first Illinois volunteers. He was sent to northwest Missouri, where a certain regiment was besieged by the enemy, with instructions to raise the siege. He wrote as follows:

"My sensations as we approached what might be 'a field of battle' were anything but agreeable. I had been in all the engagements in Mexico that it had been possible for one person to be in, but not in command. If some one else had been colonel and I had been lieutenant colonel, I do not think I would have felt any trepidation. Before we were prepared to cross the Mississippi river at Quincy my anxiety was relieved for the men of the besieged regiment came straggling into town. I am inclined to think both sides got frightened and ran away.

A few days later Colonel Grant had an experience which once more caused him, in his memoirs, to acknowledge that he was scared. This was after he had crossed the river into Missouri. His description of his feelings just in advance of an expected battle that did not take place has a touch of humor. This humor is quite justifiable, for the regiment of the future general was encamped at the time in the little village of Florida, Mo., the birthplace of Mark Twain, and that individual himself, then better known in the neighborhood as Sam Clemens, who had just enlisted in the Confederate service, was doing his best to avoid an engagement with Grant, as he confessed many years later. There was a Colonel Harris in command of the Confederate troops in that vicinity. Colonel Grant went out to corral Harris. This is Grant's description of what happened and what didn't:

"As we approached the brow of the hill from which it was expected we could see Harris' camp and possibly find his men ready formed to meet us my heart kept getting higher and higher until it felt that it was in my throat. I would have given anything then to have been back in Illinois, but I had not the moral courage to halt and consider what to do. I kept right on.

"When we reached a point from which the valley below was in full view I halted. The place where Harris was supposed to be a few days before was still there, and the marks of a recent encampment were plainly visible, but the troops were gone. My heart resumed its place.

"It occurred to me at once that Harris had been as much afraid of me as I had been of him. This was a view of the question I had never taken before, but it was one I never forgot afterward. From that event to the close of the war I never experienced trepidation upon confronting an enemy, though I always felt more or less anxiety. I never forgot that he had as much reason to fear my forces as I had his. The lesson was valuable.

General Sheridan, whose first field service was in Oregon chasing the half starved and half crazed Pitt river Indians, tells of his first apparent peril and his trepidation. As this affair turned out there was no fight at all, as in the case of Grant's non-meeting with Harris. A young lieutenant, Sheridan had volunteered to ride across the wild Indian country with a couple of soldiers to carry messages to a small garrison in the interior. On the long ride he heard voices in front and through his glasses made out a band of about thirty Pitt river braves. These Indians, as he knew, were armed only with bows and arrows.

"When night fell he was still in the vicinity of the Indians, who, however, had not discovered him. He went into camp in the woods, and such was his fear of the Indians that he would not permit a fire to be lit. He and his two men ate cold bread only, with no coffee. "I felt somewhat nervous," he wrote, "and passed an anxious night."

It turned out that the Indians were too nearly starved to death to do any fighting and that they were looking for white men only to get something to eat.

General James Longstreet, who at his death was the last surviving general of the Confederate service, had his first battle in Mexico. HAD A GLINT OF HER SMILE.

Like Grant, he was with General Taylor's army. He evidently was a young man of some sentiment, for it seems to have been his sweetheart's picture that nerved him for battle when his heart, physically speaking, had failed him. In his account of this initial experience in conflict he tells of his command crossing a lagoon and pausing to dip cups of water. Just beyond, up and over the bank, the battle was raging. Longstreet's courage, however, but this is what he said:

"I thought of her whom I had left behind, drew her daguerreotype from my breast pocket, had a glint of her charming smile and with quickened spirits mounted the bank.

ROLLER SKATING FAD

All Chicago, Old and Young, Revelling in the Sport.

EFFECTUAL STOP TO TRUANCY

School Children Have Added Inspiration to Hurry to Studies—Makes Pupils Drowsy, Some Teachers Claim. Girls Go Shopping on Skates.

Chicago has a new fad other than spring millinery and May snowstorms. Within the last two months it has swept the length and breadth of the city. It knows no bias, is no respecter of persons or locality, for it is as prevalent in the Ghetto as along Grand boulevard or Prairie avenue—in fact, more so, for it long has been noted that the stork is partial to the Ghetto and the Italian districts. The new fad is roller skating, says the Chicago Tribune.

The report from the records on attendance and punctuality compiled by clerks of the school board that since the roller skating season reached full sway tardiness in the public schools has decreased 30 per cent has aroused interest. Upon investigation, it was found that the terror striking prestige of the tardy gong in the schoolhouse is doomed at least temporarily by the roller skating fad.

Unconsciously Chicago's army of school children, 150,000, strong, has been solving its traction problem. It has erased from the blackboards all public school records for punctuality. It has made going to school a joy to such an extent that the child who used to be pitted because he had to walk a mile to school or run the risk of catching a street car now is the object of envy of his schoolmates. The farther he lives from school the longer the skate.

It is acknowledged that the roller skating fad is reaching beyond the school children and that the grownups as well are becoming inoculated.

"Out in Oak Park it is a standing joke that after the children go to bed their mothers and big sisters—who are noted for their tiny feet—sneak out the roller skates and try them on the back sidewalks under the shelter of darkness," said John Farson recently. Mr. Farson is looked upon as the patriarch of the new fad in Oak Park.

"Oak Park intends to maintain its lead by building the first society skating rink. Then the society women will not have to skate only in their own back yards."

But like all popular diversions, that of roller skating has its vexing problems. It has been observed by teachers that the children often fall asleep at school. They skate to school in the morning. They skate home for lunch at noon and back to school again. The result, so some teachers claim, is drowsiness. Teachers in the public schools of Pittsburg recently complained that roller skating had spread an epidemic of "that tired feeling" among the children, so that they neglected their studies and napped when they should be studying.

Members of the Chicago school board who have pinned their faith on roller skating maintain that Chicago children are stronger physically than those of Pittsburg. They credit any evidence of the "tired feeling" to the annual advent of "spring fever."

Dr. James E. Chavlat, member of the school board, believes in roller skating. "I am heartily in favor of it," he said. "Of course I suppose it will not be long before my colleagues on the board come out for public ownership of roller skates. Roller skates make the school children an independent automobile owners."

Dr. Wladyslaw A. Kudewski of the school board does not attribute the tired feeling to too much roller skating. He said lack of proper nourishment and nervous strain of city life were two causes of fatigue.

As to the tired feeling feature, John Farson went one better than the members of the board of education.

"I'll bet it isn't the children who are sleepy. It's the teachers," said Mr. Farson. "Anyhow that's what's the trouble out in Oak Park—not only with the teachers, but the school board too. They ought to adopt the children's amusement of roller skating as a means of getting waked up."

The latest in the roller skating fad is to go shopping on skates. On a recent Saturday afternoon a couple of fifteen-year-old girls were seen in State street, buzzing along on roller skates, their arms full of department store bargains. The "shopping feature" is common on the south side, along most of the cross streets. So desirous are the children to "go somewhere" on their roller skates that the delivery work of the grocery and meat shops of late has been relieved.

The superintendent of compulsory education was duty bound the other day to convey to a small boy the sad message that learning from books and attending school was of greater importance than learning how to manipulate a pair of roller skates.

"A small boy who attends the J. M. Smyth school was mysteriously absent from school a couple of days during the week without excuse," said Superintendent Bodine the other day. "The lad was found going through all sorts of gestures and star-gazing on a smooth sidewalk in Fourteenth street on a new pair of roller skates. The child broke out crying, admitting he was playing 'hooky.'"

"Well, the boys made fun of me because I could not skate," he told me between his tears, "so I just had to take time to learn."

WISCONSIN COMPANY IS SUED.

Charged With Conspiracy to Defraud the Government.

Denver, May 27.—Charged with conspiring to defraud the government out of 9,000 acres of coal lands worth over a million dollars, located in Routt county near the town of Lay, the Wisconsin Coal Mining Company, its officers and agents, of Milwaukee, are made defendants in an equity suit filed in the federal court Saturday for the recovery of the land, which, it is alleged, they secured through the means of dummy entrymen and entry women who conveyed the lands to the corporation as soon as they had secured patents.

Criminal action is prevented owing to the fact that the statute of limitations has run against the entries.

While the corporation is charged with planning to rob the government of 9,000 acres of land, it secured only about 1,400 acres through the fact that only eight entrymen's titles were perfected.

Two of the sections are to be upon the Atlantic and Gulf coasts and the third upon the Atlantic coast. Gen. S.S.S. RIDES THE SYSTEM OF MALARIA

Malaria is an atmospheric poison which we unconsciously breathe into our system. The blood in its constant passage through the lungs absorbs the germs, and they destroy the rich, red corpuscles of this vital fluid and reduce it to such a weak, watery condition that it is unable to properly nourish the system, and disease gets a foothold. Then the symptoms of Malaria, such as pale, sallow complexions, weak vitality, poor appetite, deranged digestion, and perhaps chills and fever show that the trouble is affecting every part of the body. Malaria also affects the liver, producing a chronic state of biliousness, and often a long spell of fever follows when the blood becomes fully contaminated with the poison. Chronic Sores and Ulcers, boils, aches and pains, and skin affections of various kinds often result from this insidious disease if the poison is allowed to accumulate in the blood in sufficient quantities. Malaria must be removed from the system through the circulation, and for this purpose nothing equals S. S. S. This great remedy goes down into the blood and drives out all germs, microbes and poisons, and permanently cures Malaria. S. S. S. not only cleanses the blood of the cause, but furnishes it with the healthful properties it needs, so that instead of a weak, germ-infected stream, spreading disease throughout the system, it becomes a rich, red fluid, nourishing the body and enabling it to resist disease. S. S. S. is also the greatest of all tonics, and builds up and invigorates the entire system while ridding the blood of the germs of Malaria. Persons who are suffering from Malaria will be pleased with the prompt and pleasant results produced by the use of S. S. S., and can take it with confidence because it is an absolutely safe medicine, being free from harmful minerals of any kind. He returned with the sealed envelope which she had given him and which he placed in her hands. He carried also a fur coat and an armful of wraps.

"You must take these," he declared. "It is cold traveling."

"But how can I return them to you?" she protested. "No, not the coat, please. I will take a rug if you like."

"You will take both," he said firmly. "There need be no trouble about returning them. I shall be in Paris myself shortly, and no doubt we shall come across one another."

Her eyes flashed something at him. What it was he could not rightly tell. It seemed to him that he saw pleasure there and fear, but more of the latter. The marquis intervened.

"I trust," he said, "that in that case you will give us the pleasure of seeing something of you. We live in the Avenue de St. Cloud."

"You are very kind," Duncombe said. "I shall not fail to come and see you."

Spencer threw open the door, and they passed out. Phyllis kept by Duncombe's side. He felt her hand steal into his.

"I want you to keep this envelope for me," she whispered. "It contains nothing which could bring you into trouble or which concerns any one else. It is just something which I should like to feel was in safe keeping."

He thrust it into his pocket. "I will take care of it," he promised. "And you won't forget me? We shall meet again—sooner, perhaps than you expect."

She shook her head. "I hope to heaven that we shall not! At least, not yet," she murmured fervently.

From the carriage window she put out her hand. "You have been very kind to me," she said. "Goodbye!"

"An impossible word," he answered, with well affected gayety. "A pleasant journey to you."

Then the carriage rolled away, and Spencer and he were left alone. Duncombe secured the front door, and they walked slowly back to the library.

"You know Paris well," Duncombe said. "Have you ever heard of these people?"

Spencer smiled. "My dear fellow!" he exclaimed. "De St. Ethel is one of the first nobles in France. I have seen him at the races many times."

"Not the sort of people to lend themselves to anything shady?"

"The last in the world," Spencer answered. "She was the Comtesse de Launay, and between them they are connected with half a dozen royal houses. This business is getting exceedingly interesting, Duncombe!"

But Duncombe was thinking of the empty room.

CHAPTER XXV.

"I SUPPOSE," the boy said thoughtfully, "I must seem to you, to be a very ungrateful fellow. You've been a perfect brick to me ever since that night. But I can't help being a bit homesick. You see, it was really the first time I'd ever been away from home for long; and, though my little place isn't a patch on this, of course, still, I was born there, and I'm jolly fond of it."

His companion nodded, and his dark eyes rested for a moment upon the other's face. Guy Poynton was idly watching the reapers at work in the golden valley below, and he did not catch his friend's expression.

"You are very young, mon cher ami," he said. "As one grows older one demands change—change always of scene and occupation. Now, I too, am most hideously bored here, although it is my home. For me to live is only possible in Paris—Paris, the beautiful."

Guy looked away from the fields. He resented a little his friend's air of superiority.

"There's only a year difference in our ages," he remarked.

Henri de Bergillac smiled, this time more expressively than ever, and held out his hands.

"I speak of experience, not years," he said. "You have lived for twenty years in a very delightful spot no doubt, but away from everything which makes life endurable, possible even, for the child of the cities. I have lived for twenty-one years mostly in Paris. Ah, the difference!"

Guy shrugged his shoulders and leaned back in his chair.

"Well," he said briefly, "tastes differ. I've seen quite all I want to of Paris for the rest of my life. Give me a fine June morning in the country and a tramp round the farm, or an early morning start in September walking down the partridges, or a gray day in November, with a good green underneath, plenty of grass ahead and hounds talking. Good God, I wish I were back in England!"

Henri smiled and caressed his upper lip, where symptoms of a mustache were beginning to appear.

"My dear Guy," he said, "you speak crudely because you do not understand. You know of Paris only its grosser side. How can one learn more when you cannot even speak its language? You know the Paris of the tourist. The real magic of my beautiful city has never entered into your heart. Your little dabble in its vices and frivolities must not count to you as anything final. The joy of Paris to one who understands is the exquisite refinement, the unsurpassed culture of its aboriginal wickedness."

"The devil," Guy exclaimed. "Have you found out all that for yourself?"

Henri was slightly annoyed. He was always annoyed when he was not taken seriously.

"I have had the advantage," he said, "of many friendships with men whose names you would scarcely know, but who directed the intellectual tendencies of the younger generation of Parisians. People call us decadents—that, I suppose, because we prefer intellectual progression to physical activity. I am afraid, dear friend, that you would never be one of us."

"I am quite sure of it," Guy answered. "I am."

"You will not even drink absinthe," Henri continued, helping himself from a little carafe which stood between them, "absolutely the most artistic of all drinks. You prefer a thing you call a pipe to my choicest cigarettes, and you have upon your cheeks a color of which a plowboy should be ashamed."

Guy laughed good humoredly. "Well, I can't help being spontaneous," he declared.

Henri sighed delicately. "Ah, it is not only that," he said. "I wish so much that I could make you understand. You positively cultivate good health—take cold baths and walks and exercises to preserve it."

"Why the dickens shouldn't I?"

Henri half closed his eyes. He was a dutiful nephew, but he felt that another month with this dapper, English boy would mean the snapping of his finely strung nerves.

"My friend," he began gently, "we in Paris of the set to which I belong do not consider good health to be a state which makes for intellectual progression. Good health means the triumph of the physical side of man over the nervous. The healthy animal sleeps and eats too much. He does not know the stimulus of pain. His normal condition is unassuming—not to say bovine. The first essential therefore of life, according to our tenets, is to get rid of superfluous health."

Guy did not trust himself to speak this time. He only stared at his companion, who seemed pleased to have evoked his interest.

"Directly the body is weakened," Henri continued, "the brain begins to act. With the indisposition for physical effort comes activity of the imagination. Cigarettes, drugs, our friend here," he continued, putting the carafe, "late nights, la belle passion—all these are the means."

He broke off in the middle of his sentence. Simultaneously he abandoned his carefully chosen attitude of studied languor. He was leaning forward in his chair watching a carriage which had just come into sight along the straight wide road which led from the outside world to the chateau.

"The devil!" he exclaimed. "My respected uncle! Jacques!"

A man servant stepped out upon the terrace.

"Monsieur!"

"Remove the absinthe, Jacques. M. le Duc arrives."

Guy, who also had been watching the carriage, gave utterance to a little exclamation. He pointed to two figures on horseback who rode behind the carriage.

"The gendarmes," he exclaimed. "They have come for me at last!"

His face was no longer ruddy. The pallor of fear had crept to his cheeks. A note of despair rang in his voice.

His companion only laughed.

"Gendarmes, perhaps," he answered, "but not for you, my young friend. Have I not told you that you are in sanctuary here? A guest of the Vicomte de Bergillac evades all suspicion. Ah! I understand well those gendarmes. Let their presence cause you no anxiety, cher monsieur. They are a guard of honor for my revered uncle, and the personage who rides with him."

Guy resumed his chair and sat with his head buried in his hands in an attitude of depression. His companion leaned over the stone balustrade of the terrace and waved his hand to the occupants of the carriage below. They pulled up at the bottom of the steps and commenced slowly to ascend. In obedience to an imperious gesture from his uncle Henri advanced to meet them. He greeted his uncle with graceful affection. Before the other man, although his appearance was homely and his dress almost untidy, he bowed very low indeed and accepted his proffered hand as a mark of favor.

The Duc de Bergillac was tall, sallow, with black mustache and Imperial. He possessed all the personal essentials of the aristocrat, and he had the air of one accustomed to command.

"Henri," he said, "your young friend is with you?"

"But certainly," his nephew answered, with a sigh. "Am I not always obedient? He has scarcely been out of my sight since we arrived."

"Very good. You saw us arrive just
